WE'VE GOT TALENT

By
Gracia Douglas

CALLING all the Leonas and Alexs out there, Hackney's young people are set to battle it out in an X-Factor style contest to find local talent.

Rising stars will take the stage at the Hackney Empire for the launch of a month-long arts and cultural festival for 11 to 19-year-olds: Discover Young Hackney 09 (DYH '09). Choice FM DJ and entertainer Kat B will host the 'I'm In' opening contest on 23 January.

The Council-run festival, now in its third year, promises to be the biggest and best yet. It promotes participation and training in the arts through a range of taster sessions and workshops run by industry professionals in music, dance, media, art, photography, fashion design, singing, film and theatre.

Kim Wright, the Council's Corporate Director for Community Services, said: "We are delighted to present the third DYH. The festival offers local young people the chance to engage with their peers, develop creative skills and knowledge and discover ways into training and careers in the arts."

Young cultural ambassadors have again played a big part in shaping the festival, working as promoters, journalists, grant decision-makers and trainee producers. Representatives from Hackney's Youth Opportunities Fund, Hackney Empire and Eastside Educational Trust have also made important contributions.

"The festival opens the eyes of local young people and lets them know that there is so much already happening in the borough," said Renell Shaw, 20, trainee producer at Hackney Empire and co-producer of the DYH '09 launch event. "It means people can find these activities and, more importantly, be part of them."

The programme includes many British Sign Language interpreted events, plus the creation of a blog to spread the word about DYH '09 and keep everyone up to date. News, events, photos and videos, along with the opportunity to add comments and share views on DYH '09 will all be found online.

This year, the festival has also been granted the Inspire Mark by the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games and Paralympic Games, in recognition of its achievements in making arts and cultural activities more accessible to local young people and inspiring them to broaden their horizons.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Pinter mourned

ACCLAIMED playwright, actor, director, poet, and former Hackney resident Harold Pinter has died, aged 78.

The author of The Caretaker and The Birthday Party was born into a Jewish family in the borough in 1930, and attended Hackney Downs Grammar School during the early 1940s.

He played Romeo and Macbeth at school and won a grant to study at RADA. Although his initial ambition was to be an actor, a turning point came in 1957, when an old friend from his Hackney days, Henry Woolf, asked him to write a play for Bristol University's drama department. The result was his first work, The Room.

The initial run of Pinter's second play, The Birthday Party, was dismissed by critics and pulled after a week. However, by 1960, The Caretaker had made it to the West End and Pinter's success was assured.

He wrote dozens of plays during a career spanning six decades, screenplays including The French Lieutenant's Woman, and in 2005 was awarded the Nobel Prize in Literature, among many other accolades. He was outspoken in his political views, and a conscientious objector to national service during the Cold War, risking imprisonment. He was called before military tribunals but escaped with a fine.

Pinter split from his first wife Vivien Merchant in 1975, with whom he had a son, Daniel. In 1980, he married historian Antonia Fraser. In 2003, he was diagnosed with cancer, and died in west London on 24 December last year.

By-election

A BY-ELECTION is set to take place in Hackney, following the resignation of a ward councillor.

Residents in Stoke Newington Central Ward will go to the polls on January 29 to fill the vacancy left by Jamie Carswell, who resigned from the Council in December.

Only Stoke Newington Central residents on the electoral register are eligible to vote in this by-election, and they will receive a polling card by the middle of January. Nominations closed on 2 January, and the candidates are as follows:

- Matthew George Hanley – Green Party
- Patricia Jane Napier – Conservative Party
- Karelia Scott – Liberal Democrats
- Nusret Sen – Direct Democracy (Communist) Party
- Louisa Maynard Thomson – Labour Party

Residents can vote in person at a polling station between 7am and 10pm on 29 January; by post; and by proxy.

For more information, contact electoral services on: 020 8356 3233/3234, or e-mail: info@hackney.gov.uk

Honoured in 2009

By

Karyn Michael

FIVE people whose hard work has helped make Hackney a better place are starting 2009 with a New Year's honour.

Dalston resident Jennifer Sealey has lived here for 22 years and is artistic director of GRAEae, Britain's leading disabled-led theatre company. Recognised for services to disabled arts with an MBE, she said: "I hope that this recognition will help raise the profile of talented disabled directors, actors, writers, designers and arts practitioners, and help dismantle the physical and attitudinal barriers which prevent full and equal access in theatre."

"This award coincides with a momentous occasion for GRAEae as we move to Hackney and establish a home in Kingsland Road. We are delighted to be part of this diverse and creative community."

South Hackney resident, Gideon Amos, Chief Executive of the Town and Country Planning Association, received an OBE for services to sustainable development.

An 'absolutely delighted' Gideon said: "I love living in Hackney – it gets a bad press sometimes, but I think the Council is doing a good job working to improve our borough.

"As a sustainable place to live, let's hang on to its human scale and keep it green."

Professor Kate Costeloe, a consultant neonatologist at Homerton Hospital, was awarded a CBE for services to medicine.

She has led research into premature babies that forms the basis advice offered to parents faced with extremely preterm birth. She said: "Although I'm the named person, in terms of this award, my pleasure is for the hospital and the medical school."

"I'm very pleased for the staff on the neonatal unit, they are a fantastic team."

Jennifer Bell, received an MBE for services to education. A former chair of the Hackney School Governors Association, and governor at Harrington Hill Primary, E5, she has also taught at Hackney Community College.

Former Hackney Council officer, Lucy de Groot, was awarded a CBE for services to local government.

She started her career as the Council's Principal Employment Officer in the 1980s, before becoming Chief Executive of Bristol City Council and Executive Director of the Improvement and Development Agency for Local Government.

This award coincides with a momentous occasion for GRAEae as we move to Hackney

A HACKNEY artist is one of only two chosen from 250 to create the first in a series of public works in the Olympic Park to celebrate London 2012.

The designs, which will be displayed on bridges and underpasses, are part of a masterplan for a new park that will be enjoyed by generations to come. The aim is to create 'a Hyde Park for East London'.

Hackney-based Martin Richman's designs use bold graphics and materials on the bridge structure and within the underpasses.

Richman has done many public projects, from stand-alone sculptures to collaborative works with architects and engineers.

Tower Hamlets-based Jason Bruges Studio's designs are inspired by Olympic and Paralympic champions, and use audio, light and tactile elements across the bridge to show speed and movement.

Chief Executive of the London 2012 Organising Committee, Paul Deighton, said: "The two winners will contribute significantly to the development of a world-class park, not just for Games-time, but for legacy."

Of the 250 artists who expressed an interest in the project, eight were shortlisted to submit initial designs, considered by a panel that included Tate Director, Sir Nicolas Serota.

The artists have begun work with the Olympic Delivery Authority and bridge designers Allies & Morrison to develop their concepts. The works are expected to be installed in late 2009.

Drawn to city life

OVER 100 residents came to the Town Hall for a private view of the results of a summer drawing project.

Hackney Homes enlisted the help of Colombian artist and architect, Adriana Cobo for its 'Drawing The City' project. It was so successful that a competition was launched, asking people to depict what Hackney means to them.

The winners were Suzi Mary Hall with Diversity; Loula Paiza and Monique Watson's We Love London Fields; Untitled by Chris Pig (left); and

Jammie Dickens & Ben Woodley

THESE young men have played a key role in organising Hawksley Court youth club, motivated by a desire to 'give to the community something we did not have while growing up on the estate'. They have sourced funding for the majority of activities, which include game consoles, board games, table tennis and snooker all provided in a safe and supervised environment. They have given up their spare time to run the youth club and not asked for anything in return, saying their reward is 'seeing the smiles on all the kids faces every Friday'. They said: "We are so honoured to win the award. The stereotypes of young people doing wrong in Hackney is wrong, and we want to inspire and encourage young people to take an interest in their community. We are proud that the club has been recognised."

Ron Devoti

DEDICATED 30 years of his life to improving life for residents on Clapton's estates. Well-loved and respected, Ron has worked tirelessly for others since the 1950s. He started out by establishing a Boys Club, and later became Secretary of his Tenants Association as well as helping establish the Tenants Levy Group and the first Tenants Compact.

Steve Harvey

TENDED a garden for older people on his estate for ten years. Recently he obtained a planting grant, and now with his help, a former storage area is being looked after by children from the estate.

Noreen Kearney

TREASURER of the Nightingale Estate senior citizens' lunch club in Clapton for seven years. The 70-year-old works hard every morning preparing lunches, as well as arranging seaside trips, social evenings, and Easter, Halloween and Christmas events.

Home stars

By

Olaide Oyekanmi

Two rising stars swept the board at Hackney Homes' annual residents awards, attended by hundreds of local people from over 40 tenants groups.

Ben Woodley and Jammie Dickens from Hawksley Court, Stoke Newington, won the young resident of the year category, plus resident group of the year for the youth club they helped establish together.

Husband and wife team, Jill and Vince Murrain, won the coveted resident of the year award for their work running Kings Crescent Youth and Sports Club in Finsbury Park.

Resident of the year runners-up Ron Devoti, Noreen Kearney and Steve Harvey, were all commended for their dedication to their estates.

James Cook MBE, former British and European super middleweight champion and a force behind the Pedro Youth Centre in Clapton kicked off the evening by giving a rousing speech encouraging others to give back to their communities.

Hackney Homes looks after the Council's housing stock. Its chairman Rupert Tyson said: "This has been a really positive evening and we've seen how many residents are truly making a difference in their local area and setting an example for us all."

He added: "I'm proud our winners are real role models to young people and that their peers are acknowledging the impact they are having on them and in their communities."

“This award has confirmed to us that we are making a difference”

Jill & Vince Murrain

THIS husband and wife team are described as 'active and committed' in running the King's Crescent Youth and Sport Club, which lays on activities for young people during the school holidays. It is not just about sports – they offer healthy eating, dancing, and creative writing sessions for young people to express themselves.

Jill and Vince have held together the organisation by putting in many voluntary hours to ensure young people in the area don't miss out and there are now 150 children and young people registered as members. They said: "Winning this award has confirmed to us that we are making a difference. But this award is for all the people who give up their time in the area to make the youth club a success every holiday."

Tyssen pupils get to grips with wheelchair basketball at Hackney Community College

The hot seat

By Emma Britton

PUPILS from Tyssen Primary School had the chance to shoot hoops with the best when they were joined by a Paralympic medallist and a Hackney Sparrows player for an afternoon of wheelchair basketball.

The 30 children were coached and given top tips by GB Paralympian Andy Blake, who won a bronze medal in Beijing this summer, and Chair of the Hackney Sparrows wheelchair basketball club, Amir Laksari.

Fiona Fletcher-Smith, the Council's Corporate Director for Neighbourhoods and

A great opportunity for young residents to learn about a Paralympic team game

Regeneration, said: "This was a great opportunity for our young residents to learn more about a Paralympic team game, and to use Hackney's status as a host borough for the 2012 Games to inspire them to become more active."

The matches at SPACe, Hackney Community College, on 12 December, were organised by the Council's 2012 Games Unit in partnership with management consultants from Bain & Company.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Sprinting towards 2012

CHILDREN and teenagers in Hackney can take their first step – or leap – towards 2012 by enrolling on an athletics training programme.

From this month, GLL – which runs Hackney's leisure services – will provide six to 16-year-olds the opportunity to participate in athletics and sport with both a national and international aim. The London Track Stars Junior Athletic Programme, at Mile End Athletics Centre, will see a team of UK Athletics qualified coaches offer training sessions in sportshall athletics, cross country, and track and field athletics.

The main aim of the programme is to attract families into the sport and promote long term involvement for young people in healthy physical activity. For info visit:

A free play's the thing

TWO Hackney theatres are among 31 London venues taking part in a pilot scheme offering free tickets to young people.

The Hackney Empire, in Mare Street, and the Arcola Theatre, E8, have both been awarded a £30,000 share of an Arts Council England grant from the Department of Culture, Media and Sport. Over two years, the £2.5million grant will fund a 258,000 ticket give away to Londoners under 26. Simon Thomsett, Chief Executive of the Empire, said: "We are delighted to have successfully secured funds from the Free Theatre Initiative and expect the scheme to be very popular indeed with our audiences."

"We already have a strong reputation for the genuine diversity of our audiences and for attracting people who do not necessarily consider themselves theatregoers. This initiative will allow us to target new groups and individuals for whom a visit is usually financially prohibitive."

The Arcola's Executive Director, Ben Todd, said: "This is really good for us. We already give away quite a few tickets with our 60-plus and Turkish group initiatives, funded by Bloomberg. Now we can give away even more, and strengthen our links with schools."

Do you really need to go to hospital?

Many coughs, colds, vomiting, and flu symptoms can be treated well at home. When it comes to your health, you are the most important person, as you know your body better than anyone. All colds and most sore throats are caused by viruses and do not need antibiotics. Most people are better within 3 or 4 days. If in doubt you can call NHS direct on 0845 4647

If you are over 65 years or fall into a group of patients for whom it is recommended, and have not yet had a flu jab it is not too late. Contact your GP or Community pharmacist.

Good tips to consider

- Stay home, drink plenty of fluids and rest.
- Stock your cupboard with flu and cold remedies, enough to see you and your family through the holidays
- Make sure you have your repeat prescriptions
- Ask your local pharmacist about the care they can offer you – many local pharmacists now treat minor ailments and offer a scheme called 'pharmacy first'
- If you need emergency contraception, visit your local pharmacist

Superstudio

Gracia Douglas

STUDENTS were on hand to welcome guests to the launch of Haggerston School's colourful 'Super Studio' – which they helped design.

The new facility will be the centre for a Project Based Learning (PBL) pilot scheme to help 11 to 14-year-olds develop as independent learners.

Year Seven pupils provided tours of the Weymouth Terrace school's newly-converted studio, formerly a gym, during the launch event on 16 December.

PBL has been running since September 2008. Every Friday, half the Year Seven students get to spend the whole day in the new learning space. Jeanine Jarvis, 11, said: "We really look forward to using the studio. It's much better than working in the classroom and we enjoy expressing ourselves in this fun, learning space."

Staff at the school have also embraced the pilot scheme and feel it gives students new ways to discuss their learning, as well as developing skills that can be transferred to other subjects.

Headteacher Maggie Kalnins explained: "Adults have come together and listened to what is needed to help our young people to learn. The studio provides more space and resources for students to develop."

“Adults have listened to what is needed to help our young people to learn”

Haggerston is one of a small number of schools across the country to have introduced PBL. Students focus on developing skills for personal learning and time management through projects which have a strong humanities element underpinned by literacy, numeracy and ICT.

Hackney highlights 08

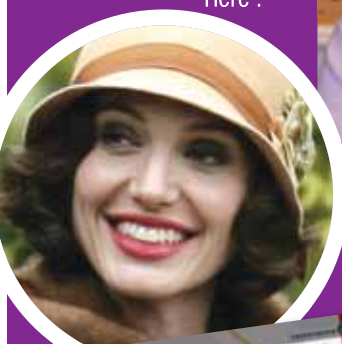

January

Stars come out

The year got off to a flying start as Hackney Today caught up with local resident and panto star Christopher Biggins after his triumphant stint on 'I'm A Celebrity...Get Me Out Of Here'.

Hackney's Mayor Jules Pipe was made CBE in the Queen's New Year's Honours List for services to local government. The borough made it onto the Tube map with four new stations shown for the first time. And scenes from Angelina Jolie's latest movie The Changeling were filmed in Beck Rd and Navarino Rd.

February

Wheely glamorous

Hackney Council was dubbed one of the most improved in the country by the Audit Commission, which awarded it a 3 star 'good' rating. The borough experienced a touch of glamour with the Wheels & Heels catwalk show for London Fashion Week, which won a Transport for London award for raising cycling awareness. And the 80s themed BBC drama Ashes to Ashes, filmed almost entirely in Hackney, was screened to critical acclaim.

March

The big freeze

More than 1,000 people went to the Ocean to find out about new jobs created by the 2012 Games. Olympian Jonathan Edwards, local hero Paralympian Dervis Konuralp, and Choice FM's DJ Kat attended related events in Town Hall Square. At the annual budget meeting, the Council Tax was frozen for the third year running. £160million of investment for Dalston town centre regeneration was also announced. Celebrity Big Brother winner Shilpa Shetty visited Seabright primary. A new series of The Apprentice began featuring an episode shot in Hackney Town Hall.

April

Good business

Woodberry Down Children's Centre opened, marking the midway point of a scheme to develop a network across Hackney. The 22 centres will improve access to many services for the borough's youngsters and their families.

Hackney celebrated the success of local firms at the annual Mayor's Business Awards where media company Somethin' Else picked up the top prize.

Hundreds turned out to pay their last respects to refuse collector Michael Bridger who gave 25 years of loyal service to the borough. At his family's request, the funeral cortege was led by a Council refuse truck.

May

New Speaker

The new Speaker, Cllr Ian Rathbone, was elected at the Council's Annual General Meeting. Hackney's licensing committee turned down an application for a strip club at Satchmo's in Stoke Newington, a move supported by a local residents' campaign. Hackney Paralympian swimmer Dervis Konuralp was selected to represent Britain in the 2008 Beijing Games, setting three new British records in the qualifying heats. And the Hackney Empire played host to Simon Cowell and Piers Morgan at the auditions for Britain's Got Talent.

June

Fair Trade borough

Hackney won praise after being officially recognised as a Fairtrade borough. It was the culmination of two years work by campaigners and showed Hackney is doing its bit to ensure a better deal for farmers and workers in poorer countries. Local residents (from top) Margaret Knights, Ena Fry, Donna Kinnair, Janette Hynes, and Rachel Pinter were recognised in the Queen's Birthday Honours list.

While Hackney girl Anne Keovathong made it through to the second round of the Wimbledon ladies singles, putting up a brave fight against defending champion Venus Williams.

Seven of the borough's parks picked up national Green Flag awards for excellence

DID YOU KNOW?

2008 was quite a year for Hackney. This feature looks back at some of the year's highlights and celebrates the many significant events that took place in the borough over the past 12 months seven of the borough's parks picked up national Green Flag awards for excellence. Hackney Police took part in a London wide crackdown on gun and knife crime, tackling serious violence amongst young people.

July

And Olympic gold medallist Dame Kelly Holmes launched a national school sports initiative at Queensbridge Community Sports Centre in Holly St.

Hackney's many fabulous green spaces were recognised when

August

Raising the flag

Over 5,000 people watched the event on a big screen in Shoreditch Park, as local lass, Leona Lewis, led the celebrations in China. Hackney's young people achieved more success as GCSE results in the borough went up for the sixth year running. More than 4,000 cyclists took part in Tour de Hackney, the first borough-wide mass cycling event.

And Ridley Rd market was the main star in BBC drama Moses Jones, due to be broadcast later this year.

Hackney officially became a host borough for the 2012 Olympic Games as the flag was passed from Beijing to London.

September

Clean streets

The Council launched a crack down on litter louts with a public campaign to Keep Hackney Tidy.

The Paralympic Games closed in Beijing and handed over to London, which was marked by celebrations at the Town Hall Square and Clissold Leisure Centre. The borough also hosted a party for the start of the UK wide Cultural Olympiad with a spectacular carnival. And Skills minister David Lammy met local young people who joined the Council's Young Apprentices Scheme.

October

Recognising success

Commander's Awards ceremony. Nearly 3,000 young people turned out to vote in the Hackney Youth Parliament elections.

More than 70 police officers, CCTV operators and Council staff were commended for their bravery, professionalism and dedication in tackling crime in Hackney at the annual police Borough

The borough scooped two awards in the London in Bloom competition.

And Olympic triple jump silver medallist and Hackney hero Phillips Idowu joined a spectacular parade through central London.

November

Lest we forget

The achievements of Council staff were recognised at the annual Hackney Stars awards, presented by Christopher Biggins and Barbara Windsor.

Apprentice winner, Tim Campbell, launched his Bright Ideas Trust in Hackney; a charity set up to help young entrepreneurs hit the big time. Hundreds turned out to honour the borough's war dead at the Remembrance Day parade.

And seven lucky Youth Parliament members witnessed first-hand the historic election of USA President Barack Obama.

December

Festive fun

Future programme to rebuild our secondary schools was given the financial go-ahead. The Hackney Empire launched its pantomime Mother Goose, renowned each year as the best show in London, thanks to director Suzy McKenna and regular dame Clive Rowe.

The Council invested extra funding in a local Age Concern project to help older people in the borough keep warm in winter.

WE WANT TO KNOW WHAT YOU THINK OF HACKNEY TODAY

Circulated to 108,000 homes and businesses in Hackney

Hackney Today was re-launched with a brand new look at the end of 2007, with input from local residents.

Since then it has gone from strength to strength, coming runner-up in two national awards for best council publication in 2008, but we want to keep improving the paper and need your feedback.

We'd really appreciate it if you could take the time to complete a short readers' survey to tell us what you think. If you have any ideas about how the paper could be improved, now is your chance to tell us.

Everyone who completes the survey will get an I Love Hackney badge, and five lucky people can win an I Love Hackney goodie bag with extra treats. You can access the survey online at: www.consultationfinder.com/hackney

The real EastEnders

By

MANY celebrities spend their whole lives trying to escape their past.

Not Barbara Windsor. She is proud of her roots, in fact, she's built a successful career on them, and has never lost touch with the places and people that helped make her a national treasure.

Born Barbara Ann Deeks, she describes her mother as 'a Cockney snob' who was determined that her only child should have a better start in life. Barbara said: "My grandfather worked in the docks and I was born in the East End, but my family worked hard to get out."

"We moved to Stoke Newington when I was three and a half. There were eight of us in a house, 10 at one point. We didn't have a bathroom or toilet, but we thought it was wonderful. Then we moved round the corner to a pre-fab in an estate and we could pick fruit from apple and pear trees."

Although space was cramped, the best room was always kept free for Saturday night parties. Barbara's family made their own entertainment. She said: "We didn't have a TV or anything like that then, but most families had an upright piano. Everyone had to take a turn, it didn't matter if you couldn't sing, or were shy."

When the Second World War broke out, Barbara's family toughed it out through the Blitz. She was evacuated to Blackpool where the family she lived with sent her to dancing lessons with their daughter. After returning to London, Barbara started ballet and tap classes with Madame Behenna's Juvenile Jollities at Stoke Newington Town Hall. The troupe put on talent shows, and it was at one of these that Barbara was spotted by a scout. She said: "I wasn't the greatest singer or dancer, but I had a big personality."

He told Barbara's mother her daughter could have a career on the stage. Mrs Deeks had other ideas, replying 'I couldn't think of anything worse' and informing him that Barbara was 'going to be a foreign language telephonist'.

Barbara wouldn't give up, and persuaded her mother to let her attend an audition. She said: "Mum said I walked out on that stage Barbara Ann Deeks, and walked off Barbara Windsor. It was like someone waved a magic wand."

Barbara Windsor at the Council's Hackney Stars awards ceremony last year which was held in Shoreditch Town Hall. She said: "The last time I was here was for Elton John's birthday."

Barbara got the highest marks in north London in her 11 plus exams, and won a place at Our Lady's Convent in Stamford Hill. So when an agent wanted to cast Barbara in panto, she wasn't allowed to quit school. Barbara said: "The next two years I undid all my good work academically. In the end, the Reverend Mother called my mum in and said she was going to release me because I was so dreadfully unhappy."

Despite her reservations, Barbara's mum agreed she could go to Aida Foster's stage school in Golders Green. But her parents, a dressmaker and bus conductor, could only pay for one year. She said: "I wasn't like the other girls, I was short and plump and they were all quite posh. I hated it, and I couldn't get a foot in the door."

After one line in panto aged 14, she got her first break, joining the chorus line of Love From Judy at the Saville Theatre in the West End. Barbara stayed in the show from 14 to 17, learning the trade.

The rest as they say is history. She moved from theatre to film, from her iconic roles in the Carry On movies, to her current status as a soap star. But she still likes to visit Hackney. She said: "Stoke Newington was in my life until I was about 22. I went back recently, my house isn't there anymore, but the area hasn't really changed at all. Clissold Park is wonderful. It was a favourite place of mine, I used to love the swings and zoo and concerts. I used to hang around outside the Spread Eagle pub on Newington Green, waiting for my granddad to come out and give me tuppence. They were very, very happy times."

"Hackney was always a multi-cultural place, I grew up with lots of Jewish families, and whenever I come back it's good to see how everyone gets along."

"I love Hackney and the Olympics can only be good for the area. I remember the '48 Games, I was lucky enough to see the athletics, it was fabulous. It felt so important that the whole world was looking at us and I'm sure the same will be true in 2012. It would be lovely to be at the opening ceremony, I'd be so proud, I'd be in tears."

THE GREEN GENIE

All your recycling questions answered

Q: I put some wrapping paper in my green recycling box after Christmas, but it was not collected. Why?

A: The paper mill where all of Hackney's waste paper is recycled does not accept wrapping paper and so Council crews are instructed not to collect it. The mill produces high quality, newsprint grade paper, and as a result they need good quality materials to work with. Wrapping paper however often contains glitter, foil and plastics. It should either be reused, or disposed of with general refuse. This will then be collected as part of normal rubbish collections.

Transition town

STOKE Newington is taking a big step towards sustainability by becoming a 'transition town'.

The aim is for local people to come together and deal with concerns about climate change and peak oil – the point in the future when world oil production enters a terminal decline.

The scheme will look at ideas such as locally focused food-growing, energy conservation and micro-generation, sustainable transport, shopping, and waste reduction.

The project will be launched on 18 January in Abney Hall, Stoke Newington Church Street, from 3pm to 5pm.

Council officers will attend the event. Various local groups are expected to take part, and like-minded people are invited to get involved.

Tree-mendous

Musketeer Russell Miller provides an insight into Abney Cemetery's 175 species of tree and shrub and (inset) receiving their award at City Hall

By
Kate Gibney

VOLUNTEERS who give up their time to protect the borough's trees, looked back on a successful 2008 as they led more than 50 people on a guided walk in Abney Park Cemetery on New Year's Day.

The Tree Musketeers collected a well-earned gong from City Hall in December at the Greater London Assembly and Forestry Commission's first awards for the capital's tree and woodland projects.

Long-serving Musketeers Eugene Clerkin, Bay Leahy, Mike Trier and Russell Miller accepted the award – which is on display in Hackney Central Library – on behalf on more than 500 volunteers. Eugene said: "It is very gratifying to be acknowledged after working so hard to improve trees in Hackney."

The Musketeers, who began life as Hackney Tree Wardens in 1998, were chosen by a judging panel that included representatives of the Forestry Commission and Woodland Trust.

As well as holding regular walks and work days in Hackney's green spaces, they have created tree maps of the borough, and produce an annual tree calendar. They have successfully replanted Stoke Newington Common with 66 new trees and begun replanting Hackney Downs and Springfield Park.

Switch on to electrical recycling

IF you got the latest upgrade to an electrical item this Christmas, or are planning to bag a bargain this month, don't let your old model go to waste.

The Council, in partnership with the North London Waste Authority, has joined forces with high street retailers to help people recycle their old electrical goods.

Nearly 40 stores, including Apple, PC World, Carphone Warehouse, Currys and Aldi are offering to take electrical waste in store when someone buys a new item.

Up to 154 million small electrical products were bought in the UK last year – weighing a staggering 551,000 tonnes in total. But, in the same period, only 56,000 tonnes of small electrical items were recycled.

If your goods are still in working order, you could also post them on Freecycle, an online network where people can give away items they no longer want for free in their area.

The Council also offers a free removal service for bulky items like fridges.

Young minds help us think green

By Kate Gibney

DEDICATED students have won a grant from the UK's biggest volunteering charity to create an educational campaign that encourages people to think about the environment.

CSV awarded the £500 cash to Our Lady's Convent High School, Stoke Newington, as part of a national scheme for young campaigners who want to bring about powerful change locally or globally.

The project involves pupils organising games, activities and talks for a community challenge day, which will raise awareness of the benefits of recycling and show how everyone can contribute to tackling global warming.

Supervising teacher, Vikki Barrowcliff, said: "The girls were so excited and overjoyed when I told them the news. Our aim with the grant is to educate and enable others to have a voice and choice on protecting the environment."

Vincent, Jonelle Telles and Ebony Harding will be leading the challenge day. They have until April to successfully carry out their campaigns and evaluate their success.

CSV awarded ten grants nationwide, together with the Association for Citizenship Teaching, to mark the 10th anniversary of Sir Bernard Crick's recommendation to include citizenship as a subject in the curriculum.

Funding for farm

HACKNEY City Farm has won £20,000 to develop a community carbon reduction scheme.

The National Endowment for Science, Technology and the Arts (NESTA) whittled 500 entries in its 'Big Green Challenge' down to ten finalists, including the Goldsmiths Row farm.

Finalists were given the cash to put an eco-friendly project idea into practice for a year. The best one will be awarded a whopping £1million in prize-money.

The farm has until October to demonstrate its 'Back 2 Earth' project should be the winner.

It aims to 'demystify and enthuse our community' with its '60 steps to 60 per cent carbon reduction'.

To do this, the farm is recruiting and training 15 green ambassadors in the 60 steps, who will go on to develop their own schemes across the borough and pass on knowledge about biodiesel, growing food and alternative energy installation.

Over the year, the farm will be hosting events, training and information on simple steps everyone can take towards reducing their carbon footprint.

Review of Controlled Parking Zone N (Homerton & Lower Clapton)

Hackney Parking Services are currently reviewing Controlled Parking Zone N (Homerton & Lower Clapton) as part of the 6 month review of the Zone since its introduction.

The CPZ was introduced in May 2008 and we want to know whether it is meeting your needs. If you live or work in the CPZ you should by now have received a consultation pack. If you have not please call: 020 8356 8877 to be sent a copy.

During the review we are seeking your views on:

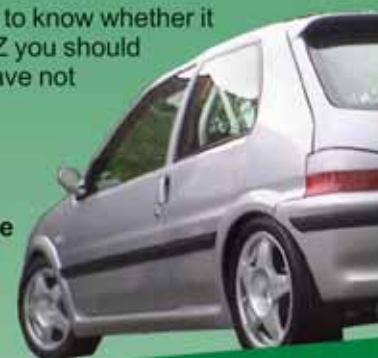

- the design of your Controlled Parking Zone
- the hours parking controls apply in your zone
- how we enforce parking controls in the zone
- the parking service

Alternatively you can have your say by e-mail: consultparking@hackney.gov.uk or by phone: 020 8356 8877. We are also holding two drop-in sessions where you can speak to a member of the CPZ design team in person:

- Monday 19 January 2009 (5pm – 7pm)
- Tuesday 20 January 2009 (2pm – 4pm)

Venue: Hackney Town Hall, Mare Street E8 1EA

For more information about the review including downloadable copies of the consultation booklet please refer to our website: www.hackney.gov.uk/parking

Remember to have your say and return your questionnaire by 27 February 2009

Proposed Extension of Parking Controls

In conjunction with the review of Zone N, Parking Services are also consulting residents in the streets outside the CPZ to gain feedback about the proposed extension of the Zone to the surrounding area.

Residents in streets outside the Zone will receive a separate consultation pack and have until Friday 27 February 2009 to have their say. Call: 0208 356 8877 or visit our website for more information.

Not just a free ride

Holmleigh pupils enjoying their day out

LUCKY pupils from Holmleigh Primary School were treated to a pre-Christmas adventure when they visited Gulliver's Land theme park in Milton Keynes – thanks to The Variety Club Children's Charity.

Youngsters got free entry to the park and free rides courtesy of Gulliver's Land. They could also choose presents from Santa's Grotto thanks to construction firm, Crest Nicholson.

The children even got to meet Santa's reindeers Holly and Ivy, as well as the Variety Club's special guest, the Honey Monster who made an appearance to help switch on the Christmas lights and greet the children.

Brenda Sullivan, from Holmleigh primary, said: "Words cannot describe the pride, gratitude and appreciation we feel towards Variety Club."

"Over more than 30 years of doing trips thousands of children have had a wonderful time participating in many events and I know for a fact that lots of our children who are now adults still have fond and appreciative memories."

"In fact, I still meet up with some of my pupils from my first teaching job and they are well into their 40s and still remember the trips!"

The Variety Club, which supports children and young people throughout the UK, will celebrate its 60th anniversary in 2009.

Getting topped out

All stories by Sylvia Arthur

YOUNG people from primary schools and Hackney Community College took part in a symbolic 'topping out' ceremony at City Academy in Homerton.

The event, which involved planting a yew tree and placing the final tile in the roof, marked a major milestone in the academy's construction – the completion of the building's highest point.

Topping out originates from Asian civilisations 7,000 years ago when the appearance of a fully-grown tree upon the roof of a new building symbolised completion. Students from Berger and Morningside

The young people involved in the design project have been inspired

Mark Emmerson with the yew tree and (below) placing the last tile on the roof primary schools and Hackney Community College worked together to create a brief for the academy in 2007, and worked with architects, Studio E, to support the design process.

The students also made regular site visits to better understand the construction process and see the progress made.

Catherine McGuinness, chair of governors, said: "The new academy is a substantial investment in the future of the young people in the area. We want them to get the best possible education and the academy will serve many generations to come."

Mark Emmerson, City Academy Principal, said: "Homerton deserves an excellent secondary school and the young people who have been involved in the design project have been inspired by the vision and the chance to help shape the building."

City Academy will welcome its first Year Seven students in September.

Winning way with words

STUDENTS from Shacklewell School triumphed in the hotly contested final of the Hackney Schools Debating Challenge.

The eloquent quartet - Lewis Todd, Ben Tisdall, Queenie Qureshi-Wales and Ruby Tripney – beat pupils from 17 other schools to claim top honours in the competition.

Entrants debated a variety of social, moral and political issues which included banning cars from cities to being a vegetarian.

After knock-out rounds, a final debate discussed the 2012 Olympics.

In addition to receiving a coveted trophy, the winning team were treated to a trip to the IMAX cinema, followed by tea with Paul Marsh, President of the Law Society. The group were also given a tour of The Law Society offices where they visited the library, which has the largest collection of law books in Europe.

The 2008 Debating Challenge was one of the ongoing programmes that law firm Linklaters sponsored throughout the first year of the Words Unite – Get Hackney Reading campaign in association with The Learning Trust.

Tricia Okoruwa, from the Learning Trust, said: "Bright young minds have never been short of energy, imagination and ideas and many of our children in Hackney seek to change the world for the better."

What matters most to you in Hackney?

The borough's Scrutiny Councillors need to know your views.

From prevention of crime, to traffic, to health and education, we want to know what your top priorities are, as part of an annual survey to shape the next year's Scrutiny agenda.

Scrutiny Commissions are made up of Councillors who work across party political lines to investigate issues of local concern, and they need to know what Hackney residents want to see reviewed from June this year.

Good Scrutiny plays an important role in the development of better policies and improving performance, and can hold the Council and outside agencies to account, including police and the health service.

Last year's residents' survey put prevention of crime at the top of the list, and so the Children and Young People's Scrutiny Commission investigated ways of preventing young people from getting involved in crime.

To take part in the anonymous survey, visit www.hackney.gov.uk/scrutiny-residents-survey, email scrutiny@hackney.gov.uk, or contact 020 8356 3341.

Hot comedy acts battle it out

Laughing at the locals

TWO Hackney-based comedians are poised to battle it out with 14 other contenders on 17 January. Since its inception the show has unleashed the sharpest, wittiest and most inventive new comics on the Empire's main stage – and then on to rock'n'roll comedy stardom, including Russell Brand, Catherine Tate, Gina Yashere, Joe Wilkinson, and Men in Coats, to name but a few. Hundreds of acts audition for a place in the final 16. The judging panel for the final includes critics, comedy producers and the industry elite – the only way to get noticed! Comedy's favourite grumpy old man Arthur Smith (above) hosts the celebrated final, so don't miss your chance to cheer for local acts Fergus Craig and Gary Colman. Tickets: £12.50; concs. For booking/info call: 020 8985 2424; or visit: www.hackneyempire.co.uk

REVIEW*Wringing out the music

By Sylvia Arthur

Twisted Christmas, Barbican Hall, 11 December

JARVIS Cocker was the headliner at the Barbican's alternative yuletide celebration, but unfortunately for the audience, who waited all night to see him, the former Pulp frontman wasn't the highlight. After two and a half hours of a bewildering mix of music, comedy and shadow puppetry – some of which worked, some of which didn't – Jarvis sloped on stage to perform two brief and forgettable songs. Luckily, there were other revelations to enjoy. Illinois-based singer-songwriter Daniel Knox was one of them. His deep melancholic vocals called to mind cold winter nights in front of the fire and were perfect for his heart-warming rendition of the classic, Have Yourself a Merry Little Christmas. Blues-folk duo The Smoke Fairies were ubiquitous on stage, and proved to be even better on their own than when performing back up for the other acts. Patrick Wolf, a piano playing ex-chorister turned art-rockstar, was sensational while unbilled songstress Camille O'Sullivan was reminiscent of a pre-tabloid era Amy Winehouse. As well as the eclectic there was also the eccentric. Canadian singer Mary Margaret O'Hara and American Sandy

Dillon provided much needed light relief, though it wasn't entirely clear whether this was intentional. What was intentional, however, was the wry comedy of Radio 4 presenter Jeremy Hardy, who ably steered proceedings from one fragmented act to another. But the night belonged to the shadow puppetry and accompanist Matthew Robbins who together earned plaudits in an otherwise borderline show.

Edward Burtynsky, Australian Minescapes, Flowers East Gallery, Kingsland Rd, E2. Until 7 Feb, Tue-Sat, 10am-6pm

EDWARD Burtynsky has forged an international reputation by photographing a succession of manufactured landscapes, from the superhuman engineering feats of China's Three Dams project, to Italy's marble quarries.

In 2007, he produced a series of images depicting large-scale open pit mining operations and resource developments in Western Australia. Australian Minescapes documents iron ore operations at Mount Whaleback, salt mining in the Pilbara region, the Kalgoorlie super pit, and a variety of open cut nickel mines in the eastern goldfields of Western Australia.

Burtynsky stood on the rim of deep mining pits, pointing his camera down towards the black and red tiered terraces, or took low-level helicopter flights, his camera attached to a gyroscope to reduce movement in the air. In this series, Burtynsky works on a truly grand scale, finding a peculiar beauty in the vast industrial wastelands we create to support our modern lifestyles.

"It's like enjoying a scar on your leg," the photographer jokes. "I'm not supposed to get pleasure out of it, but it's kind of fascinating."

Tickets to a Greek drama

A Greek history lesson

THE Challenging Tide follows the life of a middle-class Greek family through various stages of historical political and economic unrest and upheavals. Greek Cypriot writer Stavros Lillitos' play is an epic tale covering a period from the 1930s until the German occupation of Greece during the Second World War.

Lillitos deals with the dictatorship of Metaxas (above) in 1936; the German occupation; and the civil war that followed. As well as giving a historical account of the war, he raises questions about man and his relationships with the others. Romance plays a part in this suspenseful story, as does scathing humour. The play is a delicate balance of tension and irony, adventure and poetry. Teatro Technis, Crowndale Rd, NW1. Tickets: £8, concs £6. Tues-Sun, 15-30 Jan, 7.30pm; Sun mats, 4pm. Booking: 020 7387 6617.

Hackney Today has four pairs of tickets to see The Challenging Tide. Send your name, address and phone number to: Challenging Tide competition, Hackney Today, Communications, 2 Hillman Street, E8 1FB, or e-mail: htnews@hackney.gov.uk by 12 noon on 20 January. Winners will be picked out of a hat.

Sold on the big revamp

By Ola Adeniran, 12,
Rhasan Brunner, 14, &
Ziyad Said-Wardell, 10

THIS year work is due to start on a £8.9million revamp of Clissold Park.

The project includes the restoration of the Grade II listed Clissold House to its former 19th century glory. A section of the New River is also set to be extended through the park, the animal enclosure renovated, and a new play and sports area created.

We went to the park to find out what young people thought of the plans.

Although many of the young people we spoke to didn't know about the project, it didn't stop them liking the idea:

"It's fantastic news," said one girl. "Loads of people come to this park," said another, "so they should enjoy it."

We asked what could be changed and most people agreed the river needed cleaning, including Talia, 13: "There's rats in it," she said.

"There's green stuff in it," said her friend Ayesha, 14. Lily, 12, agreed: "I think the ponds are lovely, but they get dirty and I think it would be good if somehow all the water could be cleaned and filtered."

Everyone wanted their favourite parts of the park to remain unchanged. "I think the new playgrounds are really nice.

"All the animals and the green space should stay the same," said Matt. Other people we met agreed. "I love the deer and all the other animals," said an eight-year-old with his mum. Ayesha felt the play area needed redoing and the basketball court needed artificial turf. But they both wanted to keep the fields and tennis courts the way they are.

Overall everyone was excited about the 'new' park and so are we.

“Loads of people come to this park, so they should enjoy it”

My Opinion

Is there enough to keep you amused in Hackney?

By Ola Adeniran, 12

SOME young people in Hackney say they'd like more to do locally, but are they aware of what's on their doorstep?

Why are young people leaving the borough for their entertainment?

Some cite the fact there is only one cinema in Hackney, The Rio, which 'mostly shows old or foreign films'. This results in young people having to go to Wood Green or Angel Vue to see films they want to watch.

Dowa, 18, from Hackney, said: "There's no local cinema, so I have to go to Holloway in Islington." Other young people do not feel safe leaving their borough as they might not understand their surroundings as well.

Dowa added: "I think all the entertainment we have access to is too expensive which just puts us off. I normally go to Hackney Empire and Queensbridge sports centre."

Jamila, 14, agreed and said: "I don't think Hackney youth clubs are really publicised anywhere. I think they should be promoted more."

However, Rhasan, 14, completely disagreed. He said: "I have enough to do because I go to different youth clubs. I also walk around, go to different places, explore, and take bus journeys.

"Hackney supplies enough leisure because there are many clubs and parks."

Champion for London NHS

By
Siobhan Silbert

A DEDICATED Hackney nurse has been named as an NHS Champion in a capital-wide hunt for exceptional staff.

The awards celebrate the contribution made by individuals who have provided excellent care and gone that extra mile for their patients.

Almost 800 patients and NHS staff voted, giving heartfelt testimonials. Patricia Ash, a City and Hackney Primary Care Trust (CHPCT) nurse based at the Wally Foster Community Centre, in Homerton, was named a Champion in the nurses, midwives and health visitors category.

Here's what some of her colleagues said about her: "Pat is an example of what is best in our NHS and in her 18 years here has worked to give each of her patients access to the best that our health service can provide."

"She became aware that some single parents who worked had difficulty in accessing the service so she set up evening sessions especially for them. She has also been instrumental in setting up the Honey Pot charity which provides short holidays for children from the Kingsmead Estate, Clapton.

"Pat runs an annual Christmas party for the children and has even paid

“She has worked to give her patients access to the best that our health service can provide” for the party out of her own pocket when funds could not be found elsewhere.

"She works closely with firms in the City to provide gifts and amenities for the children she works with."

The awards were held by the King's Fund in partnership with the Evening Standard and NHS London to mark the 60th anniversary of the NHS.

Among the country's best

HACKNEY'S health services have been recognised as amongst the country's best at the prestigious Health Service Journal awards.

The CHPCT was highly commended in the Primary Care Organisation of the Year category where its public health campaigns, strong involvement in regeneration schemes, and one-stop-shop for disabled children and their families, were cited as stand-out features.

Commitment to reducing health inequalities through services for homeless people, travellers and gypsies and vulnerable pregnant women was applauded.

Jacqui Harvey, CHPCT Chief Executive said: "This is a tribute to our committed staff, our steady improvements and our ambitious plans for the future."

Don't take your flu to hospital

THIS winter has seen above average numbers of people suffering from flu.

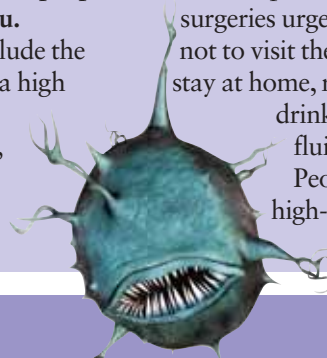

Symptoms include the sudden onset of a high temperature, severe headache, loss of appetite, weakness, sore throat and nausea. The borough's A&E department and GP surgeries urge sufferers not to visit them, but to stay at home, rest, and drink plenty of fluids.

People in a high-risk group, such as those suffering from respiratory problems, heart, kidney or liver disease, nerve problems, diabetes or a weak immune system, can get antiviral drug Osteltamivir (Tamiflu) from many of the borough's pharmacists. See a full list at: www.chpct.nhs.uk

Mud for it

By Sally England

It might be hard to imagine now, but Hackney, Stoke Newington and Shoreditch were once rural villages surrounded by farmland.

Gradually however, the city of London expanded beyond its original walls, while villages also grew into larger settlements, swallowing up hamlets such as Newington Green, Hoxton, and Kingsland, until all the farmland had disappeared beneath urban sprawl.

Following the Fire of London in 1666, wooden buildings were prohibited, and there was much rebuilding in the city. Factories sprang up as a result of the Industrial Revolution, and newly wealthy people wanted to own impressive and attractive homes.

All this building required a massive amount of bricks and North East London became the centre of this new industry because of the large pockets of suitable brick earth found in the area. Farmland began to disappear, as it was first excavated for clay and then built on, using the very bricks created from it.

Brick-making was a lucrative business and many brick fields were dug across what is now Hackney. As well as altering the landscape and increasing employment, the industry had an impact on religious life. In 1789, a missionary teacher, Thomas Cranfield, was shocked by the ignorance and wickedness of brick-makers working in Kingsland. As a result he began holding prayer meetings in the foreman's house at 5am every morning and once a week in the evenings.

By 1790, the room used was too small and the congregation had to move into a large shed known as the Factory. Still the number of worshippers grew, and in 1794 a purpose-built chapel was erected on the corner of Kingsland High Street and what would become Sandringham Road. Later, in 1852, the grand Kingsland Congregational Church was built on the same site.

In 1800, local businessman William Fox wrote 'La Bagatella, or Delineations of Home Scenery', describing the sights encountered during his daily walk to and from work in Finsbury. Fifty years later, artist C.H. Matthews produced a series of rather fanciful watercolour illustrations to the poem, including one known as 'Mr Fox going home to his dinner' which shows the brickfields and brick-makers of Kingsland Road, the green fields they are encroaching upon, and new housing development in the distance.

Although many older brick buildings survive in the area, some no doubt constructed using local materials, all other signs of Hackney's brick-making industry have long since disappeared, but traces of the vanished trade can still be discovered in images, maps, and documents held at Hackney Archives.

700 buses arrive at once

Joint-winning entries from Capoco Design Ltd, and (inset) Aston Martin and Foster & Partners

By
Gabriel Harriss

TWO winners have scooped the grand prize in a contest to design a 21st century routemaster bus for London.

The joint top honours were awarded to Capoco

Design and a collaborative entry from Aston Martin, Foster and Partners.

The competition, in which children were also invited to take part, received more than 700 entries from five different continents.

The winning designs will now be passed on to bus manufacturers to develop into a final proposed design.

Transport for London expects to award a contract to develop and build the first new bus for London towards the end of next year, after a competitive tendering process. The first of the new iconic buses could hit the streets of London by 2011.

Peter Hendy, Transport Commissioner, said: "The sheer scale of the response to this competition clearly shows how much it caught the imagination of Londoners and others worldwide. We now have a wealth of fantastic ideas for manufacturers who will create the final design of the new bus for London."

NEWS IN BRIEF

Freedom in the rush hour

OLDER Hackney residents can now enjoy free travel on London's public transport 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

Since 2 January freedom passes have been valid during rush hour. Residents aged 60 and over with a freedom pass can now use buses, Tubes, Docklands

Light Railway, tram and London Overground networks at any time. All freedom pass holders will be automatically entitled to this concession and do not have to do anything in order to take advantage of it. For more info on applying for a pass call:

020 7747 4858; or visit: www.freedompass.org

It was also announced that Londoners on Income Support are now entitled to 50 per cent off bus travel. While everyone can benefit from a new daytime off-peak rate, with reduced fares across the Tube and DLR between 9.30am and 4pm, Monday to Friday.

Green travel report

Transport for London (TfL) has published its annual environmental report, so Londoners can view its progress towards creating a greener network.

The report for 07/08 shows the steps TfL is taking to cut carbon emissions and improve air quality by encouraging Londoners to choose less polluting ways of getting around the city, promoting efficient vehicle use, and investing in low carbon fuels, vehicles and energy.

Peter Hendy, TfL Commissioner, said: "This report illustrates the progress we are making by improving energy efficiency across the Tube network and investing in technology such as hybrid and hydrogen buses."

Riding into the bus lanes

Motorbikes can now share most bus lanes on the capital's red routes with buses, cyclists and black cabs for an 18-month trial period.

Maps on the TfL website show which bus lanes are open to bikers at: www.tfl.gov.uk

A code of practice for the safe use of bus lanes by motorcyclists is available on the Motor Cycle Industry Association website at: www.mcia.co.uk

Paving the way

A SCHEME to improve one of the busiest roads in central Hackney is due to start on 26 January.

The £2.5million investment in upgrading Mare Street will be carried out in small sections, over the next eight to nine months.

Improvements include new paving and road surface in Mare Street between Richmond Road and Amhurst Road; a cut in the number of signs and bollards; a new junction layout at Mare Street and Morning Lane with safer pedestrian crossing points; a wider footpath outside Barclays Bank and at the corners of Mare Street and Morning Lane; new street lights and lamp columns; and six new trees.

Council officers will visit all businesses in the affected areas with more details before works begin. For info call Hackney Service Centre on: 020 8356 2897 or e-mail: info@hackney.gov.uk

Fast track to 2012

RESIDENTS' views on fast lanes to speed athletes, journalists and officials around Hackney during the 2012 Games are being sought.

The Department for Transport needs help to decide which local roads should be included in the Olympics Route Network, to provide a fast track system which has minimal impact on the normal running of London.

The consultation – which runs until 19 March – outlines which roads are proposed for inclusion. Next year there will be another consultation, led by the Olympic Delivery Authority, about the specific measures to be used on each of these roads.

To view the documents visit: www.dft.gov.uk/consultations/open/olympic

Residents view a site map at a previous 2012 consultation

Try this delicious new recipe from our friends at Hoxton Apprentice restaurant

Recipes straight from the ovens at Hoxton Apprentice
www.hoxtonapprentice.com

LEON graduated as our Apprentice of the Year in 2004, and is now Senior Sous Chef at the Apprentice. After his school closed when he was 13, Leon was in and out of trouble with the law. Wanting to turn his life around, he came to the Hoxton Apprentice, aged 23, having heard about the apprenticeship programme. He said: "It has totally turned my life around. I've now got skills, a job I'm proud of, and a future to be excited about." On graduating, Leon worked for three years at White's gentleman's club in Mayfair as a commis chef, before a short stretch at the Commonwealth Club in central London, as chef de partie. He re-joined the Hoxton Apprentice earlier this year as junior chef de partie before being promoted, and is also responsible for apprentice training and welfare in the kitchen. Leon's ambition is to open his own multi-cultural restaurant with food influences from all over the world and training opportunities for all.

Grilled squid with tomato onion salsa

Serves 4

Preparation time
30 mins

Cooking time
15 mins

Ingredients

- 20 baby squid or 2kg large squid, cleaned & prepared
- 150ml extra virgin olive oil
- 1 lemon, large (unwaxed)
- 2 medium sized red chillis, deseeded & finely chopped
- Salsa:
- 2 medium avocados, firm but ripe
- 15 small tomatoes, chopped
- 1 red onion, finely chopped
- 1 medium red chilli, deseeded & finely chopped
- 1 small bunch coriander, chopped
- salt & black pepper

Method

- To make the salsa, peel, stone & dice the avocado neatly & then mix together carefully with the other salsa ingredients
- Heat a ridged cast iron pan or grill. Place the squid on the pan & press down firmly. After one minute, turn squid over and repeat for one minute only
- Remove from heat, sprinkle over a little salt & place it on a warm plate with the salsa. This must be done quickly as the squid will lose its heat
- Drizzle over some olive oil, squirt lots of lemon juice over it, scatter the chilli & a little salt. Serve immediately while piping hot

The Hoxton Apprentice is a social enterprise set up to train unemployed Hackney people – both in the kitchen and front of house.

Six month apprenticeships prepare people for the workplace and give them the chance to gain a NVQ in hospitality. Profits are returned to Training For Life, the charity which operates the restaurant, to deliver more training for unemployed people.

If you would like to offer an apprentice a job, or want to become an apprentice yourself, call Patrick Lyster-Todd on: 020 7749 2805. For more info, visit: www.hoxtonapprentice.com

Zebra hurrah

RESIDENTS have responded in favour of proposals to alter the traffic system in roads near Victoria Park. Ninety three per cent of people who responded to a Council consultation in the summer supported the creation of a zebra crossing on Cassland Road at the junction with Poole Road, while 68 per cent were in favour of introducing a one-way system in Meynell Road.

Residents also said they thought the zebra crossing should be built to the west of the Cassland Road junction with Meynell Road, instead of east as initially suggested by planners. Concerns that installing the zebra crossing would cut car parking spaces in Cassland Road have also been taken into consideration, with a reduction in size of surrounding zig zag markings.

For more detail, see the order for these works on p33 of this edition (there is a 21 day period for objections.) Subject to approval, these works would start in late February and are due for completion in March.

Alcohol solution

A SOLUTION is being sought to alcohol-related problems in and around St Leonard's Church and Arnold Circus in Shoreditch. Views are needed on plans being considered, which include police patrols of the area and an outreach and counselling programme. Hackney and Tower Hamlets councils are also considering a Designated Public Place Order (DPPO), which will grant police and community support officers the power to confiscate alcohol. Offenders who fail to comply may be prosecuted or issued on-the-spot fines.

The Mayor & Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2006.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They all hold advice surgeries where you can meet your local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, they can often point you in the right direction and tell you who you need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

Please note: some councillors do not hold surgeries during the school summer holidays. Call the number below to check.

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/I-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm

The Mayor

Jules Pipe

Hackney has an executive Mayor, Jules Pipe, who is not a councillor, but is directly elected by the entire borough. The Mayor is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of the Council who is elected annually from the borough's 57 councillors. Cllr Ian Rathbone is the current Speaker.

Job Profile John Markovic

Head of Projects & Programme Management talks to Hackney Today about the Community Services Project Manager vacancies

What are the main responsibilities of the role?

Leading one or more projects, you will report to the project sponsor. You may be working to develop proposals and deliver outputs in services such as parks, libraries, or aspects of adult social care transformation. You will have procurement aspects of the project to consider, and potentially, contracting, commercial issues, financial and budget control, report preparation, consultation and community engagement, data analysis, and risk management. Sector-specific knowledge, skills and experience can be a tremendous advantage.

What are the ideal qualities you are looking for?

As well as the skills and knowledge above, personal qualities are vital. We look for bright and adaptable people with a willingness to learn and share; a calm, dependable and reliable manner that projects a positive, can-do attitude; and a passion for delivering improvements. And a sense of humour can come in handy on occasion!

Why is it good to work in Hackney?

Hackney is such a vibrant borough and no two days are the same. You will be joining a team which is passionate about what they do. There are major projects coming up, so this is a great opportunity to be part of shaping high quality services for now and the future.
